DEATH STRIKES THRU BRAIN WITH APOPLEXY

WITHOUT A STRUGGLE OR A WORD, THE HEAD OF NATION SUCCUMBED

After Simplest Private Funeral Services in Presidential Suite, Remains Will be Placed on Special Train at 7 P. M. for Washington

President Passed With the Sunset as the Last Rays of California Golden Sunshine Poured Into Room Where Mrs. Harding Read to Him

(By United Press)

San Francisco, Aug. 3.—The president is dead.

Death, apparently balked by medical men, struck suddenly and without warning at 7:20 last night.

Mr. Harding was definitely on the way to recovery from ptomaine poisoning, acute indigestion and pneumonia infection which followed them.

But death found a way through the armor—it struck through the brain with apoplexy. Without a struggle or a word, and only a futile shudder fo the weakened frame and the raising of a hand, the nation's president passed beyond.

Tonight they are taking Warren G. Harding's body home—back to the White House where he worked as chief magistrate of the people who, today, shocked beyond expression by his death, mourn for him and his wife. After the simplest private funeral services in the presidential suite in the Palace Hotel, where he took to his room on Sunday morning, the president's remains will be placed aboard a special train which will leave San Francisco at 7 p. m. for Washington. He will be laid to rest in his old home town, Marion, Ohio, the country village which he raised from rural obscurity into national prominence. Before the final obsèquies there, which will mark his burial, the president's body probably will lie in state in Washington.

Passed With Sunset

The president passed with the sunset. The last rays of California's golden sunshine were pouring into his room where Mrs. Harding who has been by his side since he was stricken Saturday, sat reading to him from a magazine. Dr. Sawyer, his old friend and personal physician, sat nearby.

The president was lying very still, listening to Mrs. Harding. To the watchful eyes of his two nurses, Miss Ruth Powderly and Miss Sue Dausser, he seemed comfortable and resting easier than at any time since he became ill. Mrs. Harding and his nurses were feeling easier about his condition. They were looking forward without fear or anxiety to the night—another night they believed, when the restorative power of sleep would add a little more to the slowly growing strength of the president.

Mrs. Harding read until she came to the end of a paragraph, then turned to look at her husband.

"That sounds good, go ahead," said Mr. Harding.

Mrs. Harding turned again to the magazine and read. She had not finished a sentence when as though someone had struck a sudden and crushing blow the president threw one hand over his head. It was as though he sought to ward off the blow which death, in that unguarded moment, had aimed with unerring directness at a vital spot.

No Time for Farewell

The president stiffened suddenly, and as suddenly droped back limply. In that position he drew his last breath and the spirit winged away from the weary body. There was no time for a word of farewell to his dearly beloved wife, no struggle or fight or futile efforts to keep a hold on life.

Just ni an instant, like the dropping of the sun behind the hills, he went out. He who a moment before had been president of the United States, the object of the solicitude and sympathizing concern of 110,000,000 people, became a bit of clay, and millions who had watched thru days of alarm, his wife and close friends, who had passed through the cycle of alarm, deepening fear and back to hope, relief and practical recovery, mourned him.

Sensed the End

Mrs. Harding had sensed rather than seen that something was wrong. She turned quickly and with a gasp rose from her chair, crying "Warren." But he couldn't see her, and she went stumbling out of the room into the corridor crying, "Send Dr Boone."

A moment before Dr. Sawyer, noting with practiced eyes that his patient seemed to be in the same condition as had continued all day, passed towards his own room. Mrs. Harding's cry brought him back—but too late.

Dr. Boone, associated with Sawyer in the fight in defense of the president's life, came in. The three other doctors came—Dr. Hubert Work, secretary of the interior in the dead dead president's cabinet, Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, eminent head of the American Medical Association and president of Leland Stanford University and Dr. Charles M. Cooper heart specialist.

Mrs. Harding Courageous

They turned anxious eyes to the slight woman at the bedside, but she read their thoughts. She said: "I'm not going to break down."

She looked down again at that strongly marked face, and then a nurse led her to her own room.

By this time word of alarm had spread throughout the corridors adjacent to the president's suite. Secret service men, their faces stonily set, hurried as messengers to set in motion the sad plans which must be made.

"Something has happened," passed the word in the corridors near the door which barred entrance to the presidential suite. Attendants of the Palace Hotel passed the fateful word to other members of the president's party. Men stood up suddenly from half-eaten dinners with looks of indescribable horror and unbelief plain on their faces. Women gasped.

WILSON EXPRESSES SYMPATHY TO WIDOW

Washington, Aug. 3.—Woodrow Wilson today dispatched a message of sympathy to the widow of President Harding.

The message was not made public here. Word of the passing of President Harding was given to Mr. Wilson early today. An effort made by Mrs. Wilson to keep the news from him until he arose this morning was unsuccessful.

WIDOW BEARS SHOCK BRAVELY

San Francisco, Aug. 3—Mrs. Harding, who had not slept up to 7 a. m. since the death of the president, was visited at that time by Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hoover. On leaving the presidential suite the secretary of commerce told of the brave manner in which Mrs. Harding was withstanding the shock. Hoover said that the president looked as peaceful as though merely asleep.

Asked as to whether President Harding was ever in delirium, Hoover said no, he was never delirious, and was cheerful all the time that he was with him.

GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENTS CLOSED OUT OF RESPECT

Washington, Aug. 3.—The United States government today closed its doors out of respect to the memory of President Harding.

After the conference between Secretary Hughes and Postmaster General New—the only two members of the cabinet in the city—Hughes issued orders closing all departments of the government for the day.

DEEP SENSE OF PERSONAL LOSS

A deep sense of personal loss was apparent throughout the mourning of the nation for Warren Gamaliel Harding.

Flags at half mast, black bordered newspaper columns, solemn meetings in which messages of sympathy were sent to Florence Kling Harding, bespoke national regret at the president's passing.

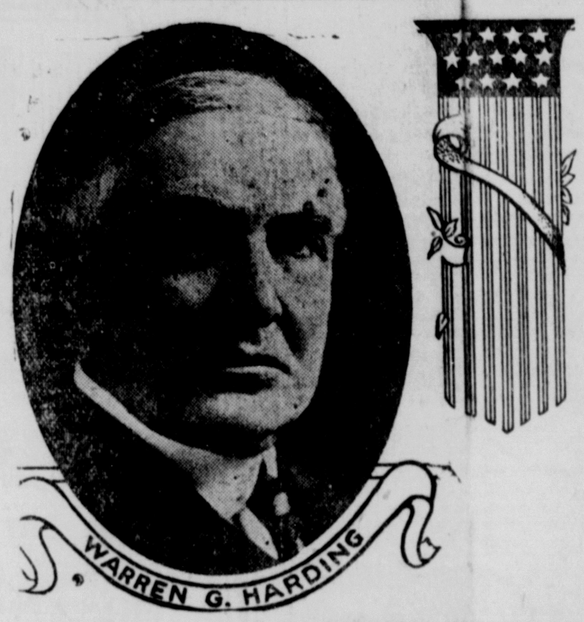

Throughout the world wherever the word was flashed, diplomats and just common folks voiced expressions of regret. Consular offices of the United States in far away places flew the signal that marked the president's death. Expressions of sympathy were forwarded to Mrs. Harding from many lands.

HE WAS A GOOD PRESIDENT

The nation bowed its head in grief when radio and telegraph flashed the news of the death of President Warren G. Harding. And with it also came a feeling of deepest sympathy for his wife, who, seated at his bedside and reading his favorite book, had seen death snatch from her arms her loved one.

It was not alone the deadly ptomaine poisoning and lung infection which sapped his strength and made him fall a victim of apoplexy. It was hard and unremittent toil that also took its toll of the vitality of the president so that he could not resist the inroads of fresh complications.

You think, reader, that President Harding was enjoying a vacation when he and his wife and official party took the jaunt to Alaska. He left Washington June 20 and traveled 39 days. He covered by train, steamship and automobile about 7,500 miles. He delivered 60 speeches, all carefully prepared. He faced all kinds of weather. He maintained constant touch with his office in Washington.

The president is not only the representative of a great nation, but he is also the head of a party. America demands much of its chief executive. It often expects too much. Through all the troublous period of post-war conditions Harding had shown himself calm, kindly and courageous and had demonstrated his efficiency. Originally an editor, he had always been close to the people.

He has gone, but the record of his deeds, the manly thought conveyed in his addresses, they have gained imperishable renown and the name of Harding can be inscribed with that of Washington and all the other presidents who considered service above self.

$1,000,000 HUGE NEW POWER PLANT IS ASSURED AS ADDITION TO NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILWAY SHOPS IN BRAINERD

It is announced that the Northern Pacific railway shops, largest locomotive repair shops in the west, are to have a huge new steam power plant added, for which the initial budget of the railway provides approximately $650,000. It is believed by many that the entire construction cost will come to a million dollars.

It is reported further that completing the making of detailed plans, construction will soon be under way. This, more than anything else, gives assurance to the world at large that the Northern Pacific railway shops in Brainerd are a permanent institution.

TOOK OATH AS PRESIDENT OF UNITED STATES AT 2:47 A. M. TODAY

AGED FATHER NOTARY PUBLIC, ADMINISTERED OATH TO NEW EXECUTIVE

(By United Press)

Plymouth, Vt., Aug. 3.—By the dim light of a flickering oil lamp, Calvin Coolidge took the oath as president of the United States at 2:47 a. m. today. He started for Washington at 9:40 a. m.

Just a few hours after word of the death of Warren G. Harding reached him from San Francisco Coolidge stood in the old parlor of the family farmhouse in this isolated hamlet, deep in the Vermont mountains, and was sworn in by his aged father, John Coolidge, who is a notary public.

Other presidents have taken the oath on a high rostrum before the capitol at Washington with the chief justice of the supreme court administering the oath, with troops drawn up, with bands and flags and vast cheering crowds of witnesses.

Calvin Coolidge was inaugurated in a small room just across the road from the house where he was born in the early hours of the morning with his old father—unshaven and collarless—handing him the well-thumbed family Bible in the presence of his wife, Jim McMinery, a chauffeur, Congressman Porter H. Dae, L. L. Lane, president of the Railway Mail Association of New England, and Secretary Geisser of his Washington office. These were all the witnesses of the solemn simple ceremony—made all the more solemn by the knowledge that death had just taken his predecessor with shocking suddenness and by the gloomy somber surroundings.

There was no music save the lonesome chirping of crickets outside, no acclaim save the whispers of a few of the neighbors who gathered near the house and murmured to one another, "Cal is being sworn in as president in there." For the first time in history no newspapermen were present when the president was inaugurated. Later, when they arrived, he gave out the following statement: "Reports have reached me, which I fear are correct, that President Harding is gone. The world has lost a great and good friend. I mourn his loss. He was my chief and my friend."

"It will be my policy to carry out the policies for the service of the American people and for the meeting of their responsibilities wherever they may arise."

"For this purpose I shall seek to co-operate with all those who have been associated with the president during his term of office. Those who have been giving their efforts to assist him I wish to remain in office that they may assist me.

"May the people of the country be with me in the direction of the destinies of our nation."

Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge sent the following telegram to Mrs. Harding: "We offer you our deepest sympathy. May God bless you and keep you."

COOLIDGE ARRIVED AT TROY, NEW YORK

Troy, N. Y., Aug. 3.—President Calvin Coolidge and party arrived here at 1:33 p. m. today en route to Washington in a special car over the Rutland Railroad. The car was attached to a special train and left at 1:... for New York City over the New York Central.

FIVE U. S. SENATORS SAIL FOR EUROPE

LA FOLLETTE TAKING TRIP TO ACQUAINT SELF WITH FOREIGN CONDITIONS

New York, Aug. 3.—Senator Robert M. LaFollette of Wisconsin, just before sailing for Europe in company with four other senators, Kenneth McKellar of Tennessee, W. B. McKinley of Illinois, C. A. Swanson of Virginia and J. T. Robinson of Arkansas, declared the trip was being made to familiarize himself with European conditions. The five will attend the sessions of the inter-allied parliamentary reunion at Geneva.

Senator LaFollette was in a jovial mood and declared he was in the pink of condition.

He was not certain where he would go or what he would do.

He said his trip was directed mostly by Basil Manley, former director of research and investigation, and one time United States commissioner of industrial relations.

Senator Swanson said he would visit Germany, France, England, Switzerland and Genoa where he would study the working of the League of Nations. From there he expects to go to Moscow.

Senator McKellar announced he intended to make an extensive tour of countries abroad and visit the Ruhr, Moscow, Rome, Paris, Berlin and London.

Senator McKinley will visit the Ruhr after attending the union and also hopes to visit the soviet authorities at Moscow.

SAIL BOAT UPSETS ON BIG PELICAN LAKE; 4 NEARLY DROWNED

Breezy Point Lodge on Big Pelican lake was thrown into a furore when a sail boat carrying Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Hankinson, J. J. Mayer and Miss Kay Dunn upset in the lake during a squall last night.

Mr. Hankinson, prominent Minneapolis grain dealer, and his wife clung to the overturned boat, while Mayer and Miss Dunn essayed to swim to shore through the breakers.

An alarm was given and Superintendent T. E. Hawkins manned the beach life boat with volunteers and rescued the whole party.

REALIGNMENT OF GOVERNMENT AS A RESULT OF DEATH

NO SUCCESSOR TO COOLIDGE AS VICE PRESIDENT UNTIL NEXT ELECTION

NO PROVISION BY CONSTITUTION OR OTHERWISE FOR SUCH SUCCESSOR

(By United Press)

Washington, Aug. 3.—Political leaders here today were faced with a confusing question of the proper procedure in realignment of the government as the result of the death of President Harding and the assumption to the presidency of former vice president Coolidge.

This is the situation:

There will be no successor to Mr. Coolidge as vice president until the next regular elections, as there is no provision by constitution or otherwise for such a successor.

The president pro tempore of the senate would be elected when the next congress convenes, and will be acting vice president in the place of Mr. Coolidge, and will receive the salary of the vice president.

Senator Cummins, Republican, of Iowa, president pro tempore of the last congress, may not stand for reelection to the post in the next congress, it is said, and Senator Curtis, Kansas, Republican whip, has been spoken of as the next president pro tempore.

MAYO HOLDS POSITIVE CANCER CURE UNFOUND

New York, Aug. 3.—Dr. William J. Mayo of Rochester, Minn., who returned yesterday on the Adriatic after attending the congress of the International Society of Surgery in London, said no positive cure for cancer had been demonstrated at the congress.

"But," he said, "I was present at some experiments in Liverpool which are very, very promising. I am not stating a cure has been found, but the results obtained in the recent experiments are promising indeed."

AMERICAN SAILORS IN BATTLE WITH CHINESE

Peking, Aug. 3.—In a fracas aboard the American steamer Alice Dollar, caused when a crowd of Chinese soldiers boarded her at Ichang and demanded free transportation, the captain of the ship and three women, including the wife and daughter of the Dollar line agent, were injured, according to a report reaching customs officials here.

A party of American bluejackets from a gunboat, responding to a call for help, overpowered the rioters and arrested 15 of them. Shots were fired before the trouble was ended.

The Chinese soldiers had become threatening when their demand for a free ride was refused.

15 YEAR OLD BOYS ON A HIKING TRIP

George Pratt and Baxter Randolph on Tour From Brainerd to Seattle

NOW AT DRUMMOND, MONTANA

Pulled Weeds Out of a Garden and Earned Meals and 75c Extra

The following is an interesting letter from a 15-year-old boy to his mother. The writer, George Pratt, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Pratt, and Baxter Randolph, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Randolph, are on a hiking trip from Brainerd to Seattle.

A great many interesting things can happen to two 15-year-old boys on such a trip, and the letter, in a boy's vernacular is as full of interest as any book of adventure. The letter was written Monday, July 31st.

"Dear Mother and Dad: Yesterday being Sunday, there was no mail so we did not write. I am now about a half-mile from Drummond, Mont. We got here Saturday afternoon, and as Baxter was out of money, we worked for our supper. We pulled weeds out of a garden for our meals Sunday and today. We each earned our breakfast, dinner, supper and 75c extra. We got 25c an hour for weeding a corn and potato patch.

"There haven't been many cars going by today, so I guess we would not have gotten very far if we had started out. We expect to spend next Sunday in Seattle.

"I have your dollar I got in Butte and the 75c I earned and if I get a dollar in Spokane I will have $2.75. I forgot to tell you that I had a bath and washed my clothes in Three Forks, and I also got a hair cut for 50c and a comb for 15c, as Baxter and I both lost our combs.

"We have been getting swell meals here, all we can eat. In my last letter I told you how far we got. In this letter I will tell you where we slept along the way. The first night we didn't sleep much as the barn we were in was full of mosquitoes. The second night we slept in a barn and the third in a bed at Spiritwood.

"At New Salem we slept on grain doors. That is the night we saw the coal mine. The next night we slept in a barn at Almont, N. D., then at Dickinson and Beach, N. D., in the tourist parks. Up to that time we had money and got along for eats pretty good. Monday night we slept on a farmer's porch. We had no supper Monday night, nor anything all day Tuesday, but Tuesday we slept in Miles City, Mont., and had a good supper and good breakfast the next morning. During the rest of the week we either slept in tourist camps or barns.

"We washed dishes Sunday night for our supper and cleaned carrots for our breakfast Monday. We ate a fresh cake the cook on a road crew gave us for our dinner.

"At Yellowstone National Park we slept with some men who were logging in the park, in one of their tents. They were fine fellows and gave us our supper and breakfast for nothing. We had mountain trout.

"Near Three Forks we slept with two boys about our own age in a bunk house on a farm. In the morning their mother gave us a fine breakfast. Tonight we will stay at the bunk house on the farm where I am writing this letter.

"We start tomorrow morning at 6 o'clock for Seattle. I did not receive your papers at Deerlodge, so ordered them forwarded. Has anyone been to see me since I have been away? Will close, hoping that everything is all right at home."

At Seattle the boys expect to work on fruit ranches and earn enough money to return to Brainerd by train, arriving in time to enter school in September. The trip is proving a liberal education to the youngsters, especially in the matter of self-reliance, and in learning the value of money. The sights they are seeing along the way, including Yellowstone Park and the Rocky mountains are well worth the small cost, in time and money.

PRESIDENT HARDING DEAD

Smoothly and silently preparations were completed for the sad journey to the national capital where fit honor will be shown by the nation.

Mrs. Harding, showing an amazing fortitude under the crushing shock, was in personal charge of the final arrangements for the funeral journey. She saw to it that the comfort of all eighty members of the party would be assured aboard the special funeral train which will leave San Francisco for Washington at 7 p. m.

She showed signs of her great grief but no sign of breaking down as she went about tasks. She maintained her poise while she read over and gave her sanction to the railroad schedule mapped out for the train. Under this schedule the president's remains will arrive in Washington Tuesday, August 7, late in the afternoon.

No detailed plan has yet been worked out for the lying in state of the body in Washington, nor for the burial later, expected to be at Marion, Ohio, the former home of the Hardings. The train will go over the central or overland route via Sacramento, Reno, Cheyenne, Ogden, Omaha, Chicago and thence to Washington by the Baltimore & Ohio. It will slow down at stations where people gather to pay a last silent tribute.

BODY OF PRESIDENT ROBED IN WHITE

San Francisco, Aug. 3.—The body of the president lay robed in white in the bedchamber where he died.

This afternoon the body will be clothed in black for the long pilgrimage across the continent to Washington. San Francisco overnight had taken on a garb of mourning. When daylight came the gaily draped flags and bunting which had lined Market street since the president's arrival here, and the hotel where the body lay, last night resplendent in red, white and blue, was draped with black. The rays of the morning sun were shielded from the mourning city by a gray blanket of fog which hung somberly over all.

Four Marine Corps sergeants were posted as orderlies during the morning, and it was announced that Marine Corps sergeants James L. Duffy, W. T. English, A. T. Marchio and L. A. Whiting had been detailed as the Marine Corps section of the guard of honor to escort to Washington the president's body

Secretary of Commerce Hoover issued a formal statement on the president's death:

"The Almighty has taken the president from his work," he said "It is a loss to the nation and a source of great grief to thousands of beloved personal friends In my first meeting with him his greeting was "Hoover, I want to be helpful" Being helpful was Warren Harding's ideal"

"I have been told that Mr Harding came to the presidency during a period of reconstruction, a time of high national emotions, of bitter prejudices and deep conflict, a period of economic dislocation and unemployment

"He was the man needed for our times," Hoover said

AGED FATHER MOURNS THE LOSS OF SON

Marion, O., Aug. 3—An aged man, stricken by news which came last night, lay as one in a dream on his couch in his East Central street home today and mourned the loss of his "boy."

For, to Dr. George T. Harding, 80, the first man to see his son sworn in as president of the United States, the death of Warren G. Harding is a grave personal feeling as well as a national tragedy.

The aged physician is near a breakdown.

Informed by newspaper men shortly before midnight of his president son's death, Dr. Harding immediately realized the full purport of the message.

He sank to the bed, mumbling:

"Boys, tsh isibt fl C!-| .i

"Boys, this is terrible. Boys, this is terrible.

"My, my, Warren is gone."

A few minutes later after a group of friends had gathered at the Harding home, Dr. Harding said Warren had the interests of his country at heart. There has never been a president since Abraham Lincoln who had the interests of the country at heart like Warren.

Common in sympathy with the father and a mourning nation are little towns across the continent. News of the tragedy came last night as a stunning shock to the community, which had been cheered by favorable reports from the president's bedside after the illness which struck him down a week ago.

ENGAGING PERSONALITY, A WONDERFUL TRAIT

Nominated for the presidency as a compromise candidate and elected by a tremendous majority because of a reaction against the policies of his predecessor, Warren Gamaliel Harding, 29th president of the United States, owed his political elevation largely to his engaging personal traits, his ability to work in harmony with the leaders of his party and the fact that he typified in himself the average prosperous American citizen.

Although he had been prominent in Ohio politics for a generation, Mr. Harding did not really become a national figure until 1920, the year of his nomination at Chicago He had been mentioned as a possible compromise candidate in 1916. Mr. Harding, then United States senator, was the temporary chairman of the 1916 convention, also held at Chicago, and his "keynote speech" on that occasion was expected by many to put him in a position where the nomination might go to him, if a deadlock had arisen. The nomination went to Charles E. Hughes, whom he later picked for secretary of state and who was defeated at the polls by Woodrow Wilson.

Harding Was Surprise Candidate

Mr. Harding's opportunity was to come four years later when General Lecnard Wood and Frank O. Lowden, then governor of Illinois, were the early leading candidates. When developments in a senatorial committee's investigation of alleged improper use of campaign funds made the party leaders deem Governor Lowden's nomination inadvisable most of the latter's strength was transferred to Mr. Harding. His friends in the senate who had opposed the League of Nations proposed by President Wilson became active and Mr. Harding's nomination by the convention followed.

Mr. Harding was born on a farm in Morrow county, Ohio, near the village of Blooming Grove, on Nov. 2, 1865. It was his grandfather's farm, where his father then lived. He was the oldest of eight children. His father, Dr. George T. Harding, a village physician, came of Scotch ancestors, who settled in Connecticut and then moved to the Wyoming valley, Pennsylvania, before going to Ohio. His mother, Phoebe Dickerson, came of a Dutch family, the Van Kirks.

Reared as Farmer's Boy

Dr. Harding at the time lived in a two room house which he had built with his own hands in pioneer days. He had little means and to supplement his income as a physician, farmed on a small scale.

Warren Harding was distinctly a farm boy. He helped in the clearing and cultivation of the land and learned to fell trees, chop wood, split rails and plant and hoe corn. In the winter he had chores to do before and after school. He grew up strong of body and sunny of disposition.

At the age of 14 he entered Ohio Central college, a school of the academy grade, at Iberia, Ohio. At intervals he stopped school to earn money to continue and all his vacations were devoted to earning money. He cut corn, painted a barn, drove a team for a contractor grading the roadbed of the Toledo & Ohio Central railway, and taught in district school. One summer he raised 18 bushels of wheat on half an acre of ground which his father gave him.

Played in Town Band

During this period he played an alto horn in the Iberia brass band, but this was for recreation rather than for pay.

More important in its influence on his later career, he learned to set

Smoothly and silently preparations were completed for the sad journey to the national capital where fit honor will be shown by the nation.

Mrs. Harding, showing an amazing fortitude under the crushing shock, was in personal charge of the final arrangements for the funeral journey. She saw to it that the comfort of all eighty members of the party would be assured aboard the special funeral train which will leave San Francisco for Washington at 7 p. m.

She showed signs of her great grief but no sign of breaking down as she went about tasks. She maintained her poise while she read over and gave her sanction to the railroad schedule mapped out for the train. Under this schedule the president's remains will arrive in Washington Tuesday, August 7, late in the afternoon.

No detailed plan has yet been worked out for the lying in state of the body in Washington, nor for the burial later, expected to be at Marion, Ohio, the former home of the Hardings. The train will go over the central or overland route via Sacramento, Reno, Cheyenne, Ogden, Omaha, Chicago and thence to Washington by the Baltimore & Ohio. It will slow down at stations where people gather to pay a last silent tribute.

BODY OF PRESIDENT ROBED IN WHITE

San Francisco, Aug. 3.—The body of the president lay robed in white in the bedchamber where he died.

This afternoon the body will be clothed in black for the long pilgrimage across the continent to Washington. San Francisco over night had taken on a garb of mourning. When daylight came the gaily draped flags and bunting which had lined Market street since the president's arrival here, and the hotel where the body lay, last night resplendent in red, white and blue, was draped with black. The rays of the morning sun were shielded from the mourning city by a gray blanket of fog which hung somberly over all.

Four Marine Corps sergeants were posted as orderlies during the morning, and it was announced that Marine Corps sergeants James L. Duffy, W. T. English, A. T. Marchio and L. A. Whiting had been detailed as the Marine Corps section of the guard of honor to escort to Washington the president's body

Secretary of Commerce Hoover issued a formal statement on the president's death:

"The Almighty has taken the president from his work," he said "It is a loss to the nation and a source of great grief to thousands of beloved personal friends In my first meeting with him his greeting was "Hoover, I want to be helpful" Being helpful was Warren Harding's ideal"

"I have been told that Mr Harding came to the presidency during a period of reconstruction, a time of high national emotions, of bitter prejudices and deep conflict, a period of economic dislocation and unemployment

"He was the man needed for our times," Hoover said

AGED FATHER MOURNS THE LOSS OF SON

Marion, O., Aug. 3—An aged man, stricken by news which came last night, lay as one in a dream on his couch in his East Central street home today and mourned the loss of his "boy."

For, to Dr. George T. Harding, 80, the first man to see his son sworn in as president of the United States, the death of Warren G. Harding is a grave personal feeling as well as a national tragedy.

The aged physician is near a breakdown.

Informed by newspaper men shortly before midnight of his president son's death, Dr. Harding immediately realized the full purport of the message.

He sank to the bed, mumbling:

"Boys, tsh isibt fl C!-| .i

"Boys, this is terrible. Boys, this is terrible.

"My, my, Warren is gone."

A few minutes later after a group of friends had gathered at the Harding home, Dr. Harding said Warren had the interests of his country at heart. There has never been a president since Abraham Lincoln who had the interests of the country at heart like Warren.

Common in sympathy with the father and a mourning nation are little towns across the continent. News of the tragedy came last night as a stunning shock to the community, which had been cheered by favorable reports from the president's bedside after the illness which struck him down a week ago.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 3, 1923

LAST SUNDAY'S DEATH TOLL

LAST Sunday probably reached a record for the number of persons killed in railroad crossing accidents in one day. Twenty-four human lives were snuffed out in that one day and 13 of these met death through being hit by one train.

Such an appalling total will lead to a consideration of means to prevent railroad crossing accidents. Many recommendations have already been made and some of these do not seem to offer any reasonable method of procedure. It has been claimed that trains that make short runs should be halted at highways. This proposal is the result of the conviction that more people are using the highways than the trains and that the minority on the train should be required to suffer the inconvenience of frequent stops for the safety of the majority on the highways. On the face of it this would seem to be a wise proposal but, when it is examined, it is found to be based on a false conclusion. It is true that more people are using the main highways than the short-run trains but, while this is true, it is also true that there are more people on the trains than in the one, two or three automobiles approaching the crossing when the train comes along. For the reason just stated this does not seem to be a fair proposal, as the majority on the train would suffer inconvenience to accommodate the minority in the automobiles approaching the crossing.

The chief cause for these accidents is the level crossing and this is not likely to be removed because the expense of elevating or depressing the tracks would be so high that the railroads could not undertake it. In England where all tracks are elevated or depressed, and where level crossings, therefore, are unknown, except sometimes within the limits of a city where the crossings are guarded by gates, accidents of the kind discussed are almost unknown. But with the crossings as they are in the United States and Canada, and as they will remain, such accidents will be increasingly common unless those at the wheel stop, look and listen.

The second cause is found in the intoxication of the drivers of automobiles—an intoxication that is not caused by liquor but by the will to speed. It is probable that this ought to be named as the first cause, for the careful driver is not likely to be hit even on a level crossing.

Many unreasonable proposals will be made to limit the number of accidents when, as a matter of fact, the real problem is found in the attitude of the man at the wheel. Only when an engine stalls on the track will the careful driver be endangered by an on-rushing locomotive.

The first means of prevention will be found in careful driving. The accidents last Sunday were caused by automobiles being hit by fast trains. These cannot be taken off, because they may strike an automobile at a crossing, any more than a river can be checked in its flow because someone venturing into it somewhere along the course may be drowned. There is really nothing important at stake in most cases, for the few seconds or minutes saved by rushing over a crossing without investigating are not of sufficient importance to cause people to risk their lives. To run on to a track without carefully looking both ways is very much like suicide. The cause of the fatality is not in the on-rushing train or in the powerful automobile engine but in the person at the wheel. The train will not kill unless it hits and it is within the power of the man at the wheel to determine that the automobile shall not be hit.

SAMUEL G. BLYTHE ON PRESIDENT HARDING

Note—This was written shortly before his death.

FEW men are as well qualified to discuss men in politics as Samuel G. Blythe, who for many years has given his attention to the personages who are influential in the political life of the United States and of other countries. Therefore, what this writer has to say about leaders in American government, may be taken as an able account of the persons described.

In the last issue of the Saturday Evening Post Mr. Blythe tells what he knows about President Harding, and when the reader has finished reading this summing up of the president's two and a half years as chief executive, he has a higher opinion of the man who through this period has guided the affairs of the American government.

According to the writer the president of the United States is an able, hard-working, conscientious and efficient executive. He says that the fact that Mr. Harding takes time for exercise is an evidence that he knows how to get through his work and that he does this work with less bluster than some others who have preceded him in the highest office in the land.

The writer calls attention to the fact that while President Harding seems to be easy-going he can come to a quick decision, and when he makes a decision he pushes it through. He claims also that the president has done wonders by introducing the budget system in government, thereby saving a great amount of the tax-payers' money, and that he has brought this country to the place where it is the only prosperous country on the face of the globe.

Having called attention to these matters, Mr. Blythe asks the public what it would have. People are employed at high wages, business is good, industry is facing a shortage of labor and the way has been opened for a reduction in taxes. But despit these achievements—achievements that have not been equalled by any other country's government since the war—the people in various parts of the country are criticizing the president for a number of things without attending to the facts that they might readily gather. In the light of these facts, Mr. Blythe cannot quite understand what the people are after. They seem to be willing to risk the present good for the uncertain future into which they would go with theorists as their leaders, theorists who are capitalizing present discontent for political purposes. The people are not reacting because of a consideration of the facts but through lack of knowledge of the fact.

Manufacturing Icicles.

There is practiced in certain places abroad a singular method of making ice from pure water. A wooden structure about 25 feet high and 20 feet square and open at the top and sides is provided in the center with a tube connected with a water main by which water can be raised to the top and then sprayed around by a rotating disk. The water falls upon two open floors, each consisting of 18 beams widely spaced, one at the top of the structure and one half way down. Freezing weather being chosen for the operation the water dripping from the beams rapidly forms huge icicles and in very cold weather the mass of ice thus created sometimes amounts to 700 cubic feet in a single night.—Washington Star.

Wants to Feed Us Caribou.

Scott C. Bone, governor of Alaska, estimates that the huge territory under his jurisdiction is the home of approximately a million caribou, and he believes that their steaks and chops would be a welcome article of diet on the American table. He is pressing the administration with his caribou meat proposal, which is warranted to put Alaska on the culinary map.—From the Argonaut.

Burns Memorized Before Writing.

Burns committed his poems to memory as he composed them, and when he sat down to write he had before him no labor of composition, but only the task of writing down what he had already finished.

82 Years Old and As Good as a Youngster

"Seven or eight years ago I was a very sick man. Doctors said catarrh trouble of stomach and bowels, affecting the liver and heart. For more than a year I wanted to die, but could not. Upon the advice of a friend I tried Mayr's Wonderful Remedy, and although 82 years old I now feel as good as a youngster." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. STUDEBAKER 1924 MODELS

Studebaker presents its complete line of 1924 models, announced a week ago, with the conviction that they will increase the prestige of the name Studebaker which, for 71 years, has stood for the best in transportation, quality and value of product.

Into these 1924 cars are built every proved feature in design that makes for the comfort, convenience and safety of passengers, and many refinements that further enhance the value of a line of cars already highly perfected.

It is common knowledge in the steel industry that Studebaker uses only the highest grades of the finest steels. And the same is true of the electrical equipment, instruments, bearings, batteries, upholstery, finishing paints, tires and accessories used in Studebaker cars.

It is equally well known that Studebaker, with $90,000,000 of actual net assets, including $45,000,000 of plant facilities, is unsurpassed in ability and resources to manufacture economically and give maximum intrinsic value for a given price.

Produced under these favorable conditions, the 1924 Studebakers are distinctly the finest cars and greatest values Studebaker ever offered.

These are not careless statements. They are facts that reflect the honesty and integrity of the manufacturer and its product just as they do the truth of Studebaker advertising.

The public has placed its confidence in Studebaker by accepting these facts, supported by the performance of Studebaker cars in owners' use. That's why Studebaker sales for the past six years have increased progressively each year and sales for the first six months of 1923 of 81,880 cars broke all six months' records.

Studebaker never cheapens quality to meet competition. The name Studebaker stands for satisfaction and service.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 3, 1923

LAST SUNDAY'S DEATH TOLL

LAST Sunday probably reached a record for the number of persons killed in railroad crossing accidents in one day. Twenty-four human lives were snuffed out in that one day and 13 of these met death through being hit by one train.

Such an appalling total will lead to a consideration of means to prevent railroad crossing accidents. Many recommendations have already been made and some of these do not seem to offer any reasonable method of procedure. It has been claimed that trains that make short runs should be halted at highways. This proposal is the result of the conviction that more people are using the highways than the trains and that the minority on the train should be required to suffer the inconvenience of frequent stops for the safety of the majority on the highways. On the face of it this would seem to be a wise proposal but, when it is examined, it is found to be based on a false conclusion. It is true that more people are using the main highways than the short-run trains but, while this is true, it is also true that there are more people on the trains than in the one, two or three automobiles approaching the crossing when the train comes along. For the reason just stated this does not seem to be a fair proposal, as the majority on the train would suffer inconvenience to accommodate the minority in the automobiles approaching the crossing.

The chief cause for these accidents is the level crossing and this is not likely to be removed because the expense of elevating or depressing the tracks would be so high that the railroads could not undertake it. In England where all tracks are elevated or depressed, and where level crossings, therefore, are unknown, except sometimes within the limits of a city where the crossings are guarded by gates, accidents of the kind discussed are almost unknown. But with the crossings as they are in the United States and Canada, and as they will remain, such accidents will be increasingly common unless those at the wheel stop, look and listen.

The second cause is found in the intoxication of the drivers of automobiles—an intoxication that is not caused by liquor but by the will to speed. It is probable that this ought to be named as the first cause, for the careful driver is not likely to be hit even on a level crossing.

Many unreasonable proposals will be made to limit the number of accidents when, as a matter of fact, the real problem is found in the attitude of the man at the wheel. Only when an engine stalls on the track will the careful driver be endangered by an on-rushing locomotive.

The first means of prevention will be found in careful driving. The accidents last Sunday were caused by automobiles being hit by fast trains. These cannot be taken off, because they may strike an automobile at a crossing, any more than a river can be checked in its flow because someone venturing into it somewhere along the course may be drowned. There is really nothing important at stake in most cases, for the few seconds or minutes saved by rushing over a crossing without investigating are not of sufficient importance to cause people to risk their lives. To run on to a track without carefully looking both ways is very much like suicide. The cause of the fatality is not in the on-rushing train or in the powerful automobile engine but in the person at the wheel. The train will not kill unless it hits and it is within the power of the man at the wheel to determine that the automobile shall not be hit.

SAMUEL G. BLYTHE ON PRESIDENT HARDING

Note—This was written shortly before his death.

FEW men are as well qualified to discuss men in politics as Samuel G. Blythe, who for many years has given his attention to the personages who are influential in the political life of the United States and of other countries. Therefore, what this writer has to say about leaders in American government, may be taken as an able account of the persons described.

In the last issue of the Saturday Evening Post Mr. Blythe tells what he knows about President Harding, and when the reader has finished reading this summing up of the president's two and a half years as chief executive, he has a higher opinion of the man who through this period has guided the affairs of the American government.

According to the writer the president of the United States is an able, hard-working, conscientious and efficient executive. He soys that the fact that Mr. Harding takes time for exercise is an evidence that he knows how to get through his work and that he does this work with less bluster than some others who have preceded him in the highest office in the land.

The writer calls attention to the fact that while President Harding seems to be easy-going he can come to a quick decision, and when he makes a decision he pushes it through. He claims also that the president has done wonders by introducing the budget system in government, thereby saving a great amount of the tax-payers' money, and that he has brought this country to the place where it is the only prosperous country on the face of the globe.

Having called attention to these matters, Mr. Blythe asks the public what it would have. People are employed at high wages, business is good, industry is facing a shortage of labor and the way has been opened for a reduction in taxes. But despit these achievements—achievements that have not been equalled by any other country's government since the war—the people in various parts of the country are criticizing the president for a number of things without attending to the facts that they might readily gather. In the light of these facts, Mr. Blythe cannot quite understand what the people are after. They seem to be willing to risk the present good for the uncertain future into which they would go with theorists as their leaders, theorists who are capitalizing present discontent for political purposes. The people are not reacting because of a consideration of the facts but through lack of knowledge of the fact.

Manufacturing Icicles.

There is practiced in certain places abroad a singular method of making ice from pure water. A wooden structure about 25 feet high and 20 feet square and open at the top and sides is provided in the center with a tube connected with a water main by which water can be raised to the top and then sprayed around by a rotating disk. The water falls upon two open floors, each consisting of 18 beams widely spaced, one at the top of the structure and one half way down. Freezing weather being chosen for the operation the water dripping from the beams rapidly forms huge icicles and in very cold weather the mass of ice thus created sometimes amounts to 700 cubic feet in a single night.—Washington Star.

Wants to Feed Us Caribou.

Scott C. Bone, governor of Alaska, estimates that the huge territory under his jurisdiction is the home of approximately a million caribou, and he believes that their steaks and chops would be a welcome article of diet on the American table. He is pressing the administration with his caribou meat proposal, which is warranted to put Alaska on the culinary map.—From the Argonaut.

POWER COMFORT

NEW 10,000 LAKES GARAGE

Efficient Service is the Keynote of Industry Established by A. J. Welliver

IS NOW IN NEW BUILDING

Patronage On Opening Day Was Most Excellent—New Building Described

Efficient service is the keynote of the arrangement of the "New 10,000 Lakes Garage," just completed at the corner of South Fifth and Front streets, and which opened for business on Thursday.

A. J. Welliver, who has been proprietor of the Ransford garage the past year, is the proprietor of the 10,000 lakes establishment. It is distinctly to Mr. Welliver's credit as an able business man that in so short a residence in the city he has outgrown his former quarters and made necessary a new business home with three or four times the space of the old

One enters the fine brick garage through a large corner entrance easily acessible from either south Fifth or Front streets. This entrance opens into one of the finest automobile showrooms in the city, 36 feet square, with large plate glass windows on two sides. There is ample room for the display of five large cars to advantage in this room.

To the south of the showroom is a suite of three small rooms, a ladies restroom and comfort station, the proprietor's private office and the stock room.

The ladies rest room faces on Fifth street with an outside entrance and large plate glass windows. It will be fitted up with every comfort and convenience.

The stock room will be equipped with shelves and bins for the carrying of a three thousand dollar stock of parts and accessories. In the tire department a full line of Goodrich tires will be carried. Mobile oils will be dispensed in addition to a full line of Northwestern products, including high and low-test gasoline.

Perhaps one of the features of the new home is the exceptionally large storage room, with accomodations for storing 150 automobiles. In the southwest corner of this store room will be the repair shop, also very well lighted and equipped with modern machinery, so that any make of automobile can be quickly repaired or rebuilt, if necessary. Rolland McGwin will be the foreman. Mr. McGwin has had five years experience on Studebaker cars alone.

Completing the equipment of this model garage is the auto laundry, for washing and polishing cars. Twenty-four-hour service will be maintained in all departments of the establishment at all times.

The "New 10,000 Lakes Garage" will continue the agency of the Studebaker automobile, and will have on hand at all times a complete stock of the three models of this popular car, the Light Six, the Special Six and the Big Six. The 1924 editions of the Studebaker are now out, and Mr. Welliver has them in stock.

Several changes and refinements have been made in these 1924 Studebakers, principally in body design. The greatest change is found in the appearance of the Special Six body. A new radiator pattern and hood lines make this one of the most beautiful cars on the market. A new blue body color adds greatly to the general appearance.

Mr. Welliver is well satisfied with the way in which the patronage is starting at the new garage. Seventy-five cars were stored there the opening night, and prospects are very bright for a good business in all lines during the balance of the season.

CARRIED THE NEWS

Archie M. Murray, Washington, D. C., Man, Motors to Minneapolis and Distributes Journals

Archie M. Murray of Washington, D. C., who is a guest of his wife's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Swanson, of Daggett Brook country, got an idea that the end was coming and motored to Minneapolis in his Ford sedan. He bought the first batch of Minneapolis Journals, issued in the extra at 11:20 and took a thousand copies and distributed them enroute. He left a trail of Journals covering the death of President Harding along the road, arriving at Brainerd at 4:50 A. M.

In St. Cloud the policeman told Murray not to make so much noise. "Well, the president is dead, and people want to know about it," Murray said.

"Well, you don't have to wake up our St. Coud people," reiterated the cop.

So Murray appeased the policeman by giving him a paper.

ROTARIANS PAY TRIBUTES TODAY

Honor the Memory of the Late President Warren G. Harding in Eulogic Addresses

STAND IN SILENT PRAYER

Local Speakers Add Their Tributes to That of Rev. George Williams of Newton, Iowa

Rotarians at their luncheon today bowed in silent prayer for the peace of the soul of the late President Warren G. Harding. The program following, as prepared by Chairman A. J. Hayes, and directed by President R. A. Beise, paid sincere eulogy to the great man who passed away last night.

Local speakers joined their eulogies to that of the visiting Rotarian, Rev. George Williams of Newton, Iowa, who in eloquent and sincere manner dwelt on the good works of the president and linked it with the aims and aspirations of Rotary.

A telegram from Bond McClintick, Rotarian District Governor, was read by Secretary Tanner, praising the high qualities of President Harding and deploring his loss.

"Harding's Home Life" was the topic of Carl Zapffe, who said he was a man truly American in home and community life.

Rev. E. A. Cooke dwelt on Harding's life as it referred to that of a Christian and church man.

Supt. W. C. Cobb spoke of his broad and inspiring citizenship.

Walter F. Wieland dwelt on Harding's statemanship, his arms limitation conference, the establishing of better relations with Japan, his eloquent address at the burial of the unknown soldier.

President Beise alluded to the establishment of the new Rotary club in Two Harbors and the presence there of five Brainerd Rotarians.

Secretary Tanner mentioned that the picnic planned in Jay Cook park and sponsored by the Cloquet Rotary club had been indefinitely postponed.

The visiting list was a large one and included E. J. Walt of Lincoln, Neb., past president of the Rotary who sang a group of popular songs, playing his piano accompaniment.

Mrs. Walter F. Wieland officiated in place of Miss Marion Opsahl, the club's official pianist.

COUNTRY CLUB HAS GALA EVENT

Flag Raising Ceremonies and Tournament Carried Off With Enthusiasm

MUCH CREDIT IS DUE LADIES

Mrs. A. C. Weber Won Ladies' Handicap, W. R. Hiller the Men's Handicap

Members of the Brainerd Country Club turned out enmasse Thursday afternoon and evening at the golf links for the flag raising ceremonies and tournament, which were carried off with a great deal of enthusiasm and without a hitch. Never has there been such a number at the local links, or so much enthusiasm shown by the members.

The afternoon was given over to the tournament, the ladies' play starting at three o'clock, and the gentlemen's at four. There were five or six foursomes in each play, and this number on the links at one time gave it the appearance of a very metropolitan course.

Much credit is due the ladies for the delicious luncheon which they served at six o'clock. The committee in charge of this important feature of the program consisted of Mrs. R. A. Beise, chairman, Mrs. E. O. Webb and Mrs. A. C. Weber. They had the assistance of a half dozen other ladies of the club. The luncheon was served cafeteria style.

The evening was given over to an interesting program in charge of Edward J. Egan, chairman of the tournament committee. The first number on this program was the lowering of the flag, while the assemblage sang "America," led by Mrs. George LaBar and Mrs. Mal Clark.

Mr. Egan stated that the committee had decided the winners in the afternoon tournament and as their names were called they stepped forward and received prizes commensurate with their prowess.

Mrs. A. C. Weber was designated as the winner of the ladies handicap, and with much gusto, Mr. Egan presented her with a pair of miniature tennis rackets.

W. R. Hiller was acclaimed winner of the men's handicap and was given a soft rubber golf ball for his efforts.

President Mons Mahlum of the club gave an excellent address. He spoke of his appreciation of the number who showed their interest in the affairs of the organization by being present. Nearly 100 per cent of the membership turned out on this occasion. He thanked the committee for the successful manner in which they caried out the events of the day and the co-operation, one committee with another. He recommended that the social committee plan several similiar gathering during the remainder of the season.

Mr. Egan also lauded the social committee for their efforts and stated that the club had purchased a handsome cut glass water set for this committee as a mark of appreciation. Dan Whitney brought the set forward, stubbed his toe, fell and broke every piece just as the committee was about to receive its gift. It took some little time for them to realize that the fall was premeditated and a part of a deep-laid joke.

Miss Bertha Mahlum was acclaimed the winner of the beauty contest, and received a pretty vanity case—empty.

M. E. Ryan was pronounced the winner of the homely man's contest, and was presented with a pocket mirror, either to remind him of his predicament or to assist him in improving it.

In line with President Mahlum's suggestion, it was decided to hold a wiener roast at the club house the last Thursday in the month, August 30th.

Three cheers and a tiger were given W. H. Gemmell for the fine flag pole which he donated, and to D. E. Whitney for the beautiful flag which he gave to the club. The pole is in an excellent position, atop a small hill near the club house, and can be seen very painly from the main highway half a mile distant.

Special attention was called to the contest between Brainerd and St. Cloud, at the latter city on next Sunday, and a plea made for a good aggregation of local boosters to accompany the players. Many signified their intention of making the trip.

A Victrola furnished music for dancing, both afternoon and evening, and many took advantage of this form of entertainment.

Entertain For Friends

Mrs. John Holvick and Mrs. A. N. Anderson entertained at the home of the latter at dinner on Thursday evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. S. O. Brissman and daughter Claretta, Mrs. O. Berkland and daughters Helen and Marion of Moline, Ill., and Mr. and Mrs. George Stevenson of Duluth. Twenty-five guests were present.

Have Firm Belief in Devils.

The natives of Fiji believe firmly in ghosts or devils, pointing in proof to huge indentations in the rocks resembling footprints. Some devils are good, they say, and some are bad. One native told me that the devil on his island was an old man with a white beard, a harmless or good devil, who came out at nights to get plantains. Probably the native had seen some old goat, hence the beard.—New York Tribune.

Mount Vernon Once "Epsewasson."

The original name of the estate called Mount Vernon was Epsewasson, an Indian word, which was soon translated into its English equivalent, Hunting Creek.

BRAINERD WAS SHOCKED AT NEWS

Brainerd and vicinity was greatly shocked at the news of the death of President Harding Thursday evening. The sad news first came streaming in by radio and then by telegram. Several local wireless stations in the city picked up the flashes and the facts were soon upon the street.

This sudden announcement, coupled with the headlines in all newspapers that the president was rapidly regaining his health, made many doubtful. When the full significance really dawned on people, it stunned them with its force, and many called the Dispatch office with questions like the following:

"Tell us that it isn't true that President Harding is dead."

"There is surely some mistake in the news that the president died."

"I can't believe yet that we have lost President Harding."

Little knots of men on the streets this morning discussed the one common topic, all with the same feeling in the sad loss of the first citizen of the land.

The "New 10,000 Lakes Garage" will continue the agency of the Studebaker automobile, and will have on hand at all times a complete stock of the three models of this popular car, the Light Six, the Special Six and the Big Six. The 1924 editions of the Studebaker are now out, and Mr. Welliver has them in stock.

Several changes and refinements have been made in these 1924 Studebakers, principally in body design. The greatest change is found in the appearance of the Special Six body. A new radiator pattern and hood lines make this one of the most beautiful cars on the market. A new blue body color adds greatly to the general appearance.

Mr. Welliver is well satisfied with the way in which the patronage is starting at the new garage. Seventy-five cars were stored there the opening night, and prospects are very bright for a good business in all lines during the balance of the season.

CARRIED THE NEWS

Archie M. Murray, Washington, D. C., Man, Motors to Minneapolis and Distributes Journals

Archie M. Murray of Washington, D. C., who is a guest of his wife's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Swanson, of Daggett Brook country, got an idea that the end was coming and motored to Minneapolis in his Ford sedan. He bought the first batch of Minneapolis Journals, issued in the extra at 11:20 and took a thousand copies and distributed them enroute. He left a trail of Journals covering the death of President Harding along the road, arriving at Brainerd at 4:50 A. M.

In St. Cloud the policeman told Murray not to make so much noise. "Well, the president is dead, and people want to know about it," Murray said.

"Well, you don't have to wake up our St. Coud people," reiterated the cop.

So Murray appeased the policeman by giving him a paper.

ROTARIANS PAY TRIBUTES TODAY

Honor the Memory of the Late President Warren G. Harding in Eulogic Addresses

STAND IN SILENT PRAYER

Local Speakers Add Their Tributes to That of Rev. George Williams of Newton, Iowa

Rotarians at their luncheon today bowed in silent prayer for the peace of the soul of the late President Warren G. Harding. The program following, as prepared by Chairman A. J. Hayes, and directed by President R. A. Beise, paid sincere eulogy to the great man who passed away last night.

Local speakers joined their eulogies to that of the visiting Rotarian, Rev. George Williams of Newton, Iowa, who in eloquent and sincere manner dwelt on the good works of the president and linked it with the aims and aspirations of Rotary.

A telegram from Bond McClintick, Rotarian District Governor, was read by Secretary Tanner, praising the high qualities of President Harding and deploring his loss.

"Harding's Home Life" was the topic of Carl Zapffe, who said he was a man truly American in home and community life.

Rev. E. A. Cooke dwelt on Harding's life as it referred to that of a Christian and church man.

Supt. W. C. Cobb spoke of his broad and inspiring citizenship.

Walter F. Wieland dwelt on Harding's statemanship, his arms limitation conference, the establishing of better relations with Japan, his eloquent address at the burial of the unknown soldier.

President Beise alluded to the establishment of the new Rotary club in Two Harbors and the presence there of five Brainerd Rotarians.

Secretary Tanner mentioned that the picnic planned in Jay Cook park and sponsored by the Cloquet Rotary club had been indefinitely postponed.

The visiting list was a large one and included E. J. Walt of Lincoln, Neb., past president of the Rotary who sang a group of popular songs, playing his piano accompaniment.

Mrs. Walter F. Wieland officiated in place of Miss Marion Opsahl, the club's official pianist.

COUNTRY CLUB HAS GALA EVENT

Flag Raising Ceremonies and Tournament Carried Off With Enthusiasm

MUCH CREDIT IS DUE LADIES

Mrs. A. C. Weber Won Ladies' Handicap, W. R. Hiller the Men's Handicap

Members of the Brainerd Country Club turned out enmasse Thursday afternoon and evening at the golf links for the flag raising ceremonies and tournament, which were carried off with a great deal of enthusiasm and without a hitch. Never has there been such a number at the local links, or so much enthusiasm shown by the members.

The afternoon was given over to the tournament, the ladies' play starting at three o'clock, and the gentlemen's at four. There were five or six foursomes in each play, and this number on the links at one time gave it the appearance of a very metropolitan course.

Much credit is due the ladies for the delicious luncheon which they served at six o'clock. The committee in charge of this important feature of the program consisted of Mrs. R. A. Beise, chairman, Mrs. E. O. Webb and Mrs. A. C. Weber. They had the assistance of a half dozen other ladies of the club. The luncheon was served cafeteria style.

The evening was given over to an interesting program in charge of Edward J. Egan, chairman of the tournament committee. The first number on this program was the lowering of the flag, while the assemblage sang "America," led by Mrs. George LaBar and Mrs. Mal Clark.

Mr. Egan stated that the committee had decided the winners in the afternoon tournament and as their names were called they stepped forward and received prizes commensurate with their prowess.

Mrs. A. C. Weber was designated as the winner of the ladies handicap, and with much gusto, Mr. Egan presented her with a pair of miniature tennis rackets.

W. R. Hiller was acclaimed winner of the men's handicap and was given a soft rubber golf ball for his efforts.

President Mons Mahlum of the club gave an excellent address. He spoke of his appreciation of the number who showed their interest in the affairs of the organization by being present. Nearly 100 per cent of the membership turned out on this occasion. He thanked the committee for the successful manner in which they caried out the events of the day and the co-operation, one committee with another. He recommended that the social committee plan several similiar gathering during the remainder of the season.

Mr. Egan also lauded the social committee for their efforts and stated that the club had purchased a hand some cut glass water set for this committee as a mark of appreciation. Dan Whitney brought the set forward, stubbed his toe, fell and broke every piece just as the committee was about to receive its gift. It took some little time for them to realize that the fall was premeditated and a part of a deep-laid joke.

Miss Bertha Mahlum was acclaimed the winner of the beauty contest, and received a pretty vanity case—empty.

M. E. Ryan was pronounced the winner of the homely man's contest, and was presented with a pocket mirror, either to remind him of his predicament or to assist him in improving it.

In line with President Mahlum's suggestion, it was decided to hold a wiener roast at the club house the last Thursday in the month, August 30th.

Three cheers and a tiger were given W. H. Gemmell for the fine flag pole which he donated, and to D. E. Whitney for the beautiful flag which he gave to the club. The pole is in an excellent position, atop a small hill near the club house, and can be seen very painly from the main highway half a mile distant.

Special attention was called to the contest between Brainerd and St. Cloud, at the latter city on next Sunday, and a plea made for a good aggregation of local boosters to accompany the players. Many signified their intention of making the trip.

A Victrola furnished music for dancing, both afternoon and evening, and many took advantage of this form of entertainment.

Mrs. John Holvick and Mrs. A. N. Anderson entertained at the home of the latter at dinner on Thursday evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. S. O. Brissman and daughter Clarette, Mrs. O. Berkland and daughters Helen and Marion of Moline, Ill., and Mr. and Mrs. George Stevenson of Duluth. Twenty-five guests were present.

Have Firm Belief in Devils.

The natives of Fiji believe firmly in ghosts or devils, pointing in proof to huge indentations in the rocks resembling footprints. Some devils are good, they say, and some are bad. One native told me that the devil on his island was an old man with a white beard, a harmless or good devil, who came out at nights to get plantains. Probably the native had seen some old goat, hence the beard.—New York Tribune.

The original name of the estate called Mount Vernon was Epsewasson, an Indian word, which was soon translated into its English equivalent, Hunting Creek.

BRAINERD WAS SHOCKED AT NEWS

Brainerd and vicinity was greatly shocked at the news of the death of President Harding Thursday evening. The sad news first came streaming in by radio and then by telegram. Several local wireless stations in the city picked up the flashes and the facts were soon upon the street.

This sudden announcement, coupled with the headlines in all newspapers that the president was rapidly regaining his health, made many doubtful. When the full significance really dawned on people, it stunned them with its force, and many called the Dispatch office with questions like the following:

"Tell us that it isn't true that President Harding is dead."

"There is surely some mistake in the news that the president died."

"I can't believe yet that we have lost President Harding."

Little knots of men on the streets this morning discussed the one common topic, all with the same feeling in the sad loss of the first citizen of the land.

Joint Meeting

DEMPSEY GOOD SPORT, SAYS McAULIFFE

By HENRY L. FARRELL
United Press Sports Editor

New York, Aug. 3.—Jack McAuliffe, the genial lightweight and the only champion who ever retired undefeated from the ring, has an idea that Jack Dempsey may yet come into the popularity that up to the time of the present champion has always come as a heritage to heavyweight title holders.

Dempsey, as is well known, is not a hero in the public eye, for reasons that are hard to explain. It might be going too far to say that Dempsey is the most unpopular champion on the long list, because Jack Johnson held even a lower place in the estimation of the public.

Johnson brought disfavor upon himself by his conduct after he had won the championship from Jim Jeffries, but Dempsey has done nothing since he won the title from Jess Willard to bring discredit upon himself, or on the game that has been so good to him.

Dempsey's war record got him in bad with the public and while most everyone has forgotten there was such a thing as a big war, the impression still lingers that Dempsey didn't do something when he had the chance.

Friends of the champion and those who are broad-minded enough to go back to the days leading up to the war, know that Dempsey was largely the victim of circumstances and poor advice.

McAuliffe believes that a fight with Luis Firpo, the South American giant, will do much to win for Dempsey the public esteem that he deserves. Until the time that Dempsey is accepted as a national representative against a foreigner, he will not have the opportunity to get himself back into favor, McAuliffe believes.

"Carpentier was the first foreign fighter to be cheered over an American and that can be explained," McAuliffe says. "The war records of the two fighters was the big issue there and the fight was staged at a time when the hardships of the war was rather a fresh memory in the eyes of the public.

"John L. Sullivan gained his greatest popularity when he fought Mitchell, the sentiment being 'our' champion against a foreigner. When Dempsey meets Firpo, unless the animosity toward Dempsey is too deep rooted to be pulled out, the American public will rally the same way behind the champion.

"Indications of this were shown in the Firpo-Willard fight when the crowd arose spontaneously and yelled for Willard to win when he rallied and seemed to have a chance. The sentiment there was clearly for an American against a foreigner, because Willard during his regime as champion, was hardly more popular than Dempsey.

"Through all his trials and troubles, Dempsey has been such a good sport that some time sentiment is bound to change in his favor. He never has grumbled or complained. He has never made answer to accusations that were manifestly unfair and untrue and he has never shown malice toward the crowds that practically razzed him on his two last appearances in the ring."

AMUSEMENTS

Paramount Films Clyde Fitch Play

The late Clyde Fitch, dramatist, whose play, "The Woman in the Case," was adapted to Paramount Pictures as a stellar vehicle for Betty Compson under the title, "The Law and the Woman," also wrote "The Cowboy and the Lady," which has been picturized by Paramount with Mary Miles Minter and Tom Moore in the leading roles. Mr. Moore is seen as the "dude" cowboy and Miss Minter is the lady whose unhappy marital affairs result in a great deal of trouble ere she finds the road to happiness.

Charles Maigne directed the picture, which was filmed in the Jackson Hole cattle country of Wyoming. Following the completion of the ranch shots, the company returned to Hollywood, where the interior scenes were photographed. Patricia Palmer, Viora Daniel, Robert Schable Leonard Clapham, Guy Oliver and Robert Mack are in the cast. The picture will be shown at the Lyceum tonight and Saturday.

A romantic and exciting tale of the west, this play offers great opportunities as well for comedy. The idea of cowpunchers on motorcycles trying to rope steers, a modern idea of ranching, with filing systems and the like; the rancher who dresses like a gentleman of fashion—all supply mirthful moments which contrast with the tragedy at the end and the trial which results in the vindication of the hero from complicity in the killing at a dance of the worthless husband.

Vicious Rattlesnake Provides an Unusual Episode in New Film

Among many moments of surprise, shock and suspense found in "Quicksands," the new Hawks picture which comes to the Park theatre Saturday and Sunday with Helene Chadwick, Richard Dix, Alan Hale and a notable cast, is one thrill so out of the ordinary that it warrants advance description.

It concerns two men and a girl, a deck of cards and a vicious rattlesnake. What goes before must be explained that the episode in question be fully understood. The scene is a Mexican "cantina" reputed to be the rendezvous of evil characters who smuggle narcotics into this country. Among the men and women there a Mexican girl is conspicuous for her beauty, charm and alert intelligence. She protects and encourages a shambling youth whom she knows to be the scapegrace son of Col. Patterson, in command of the United States military post across the border.

The girl repulses the advances of Ferrago, a burly blond heartbreaker high in the councils of the criminals. He is incensed because of her shielding attitude toward the youth whose dependence on drugs is of course profitable to the gang. In a burst of bravado the cowardly Ferrago plans to humiliate the youth he knows to be a coward or possibly bring about his death, without being himself directly responsible for it.

$500,000 SAID TO BE SUBSCRIBED FOR 2ND DEMPSEY-GIBBONS GO

Los Angeles, Aug. 3.—A return match bteween champion Jack Dempsey and Tommy Gibbons to take place at Fort Mac Arthur, Los Angeles harbor, Nov. 27 for the benefit of disabled veterans of the world war is being sought by A. E. Santweir, who said he represented a group of sportsmen here.

Santweir said last night that $500,000 had been subscribed for the purse and that it was in a bank.

Santweir left last night for San Francisco to try to obtain permission from Major General Charles C. Morton to stage a 15 round fight to a decision. Santweir said that if General Morton gave his consent, he would go to Washington to seek permission also of secretary of war Weeks and then would talk in New York with Jack Kearns, Dempsey's manager, concerning terms.

Northern Minnesota Roads Excellent; Lake Resorts Filled to Overflow

By JOSEPH A. WHITACRE

I have been so impressed with the excellence of Minnesota roads and the system of maintenance that I can not let the opportunity pass to tell a few things that stand out so pronouncedly in a system which seems so nearly perfect. It is to be regretted that the only really unkept roads from Marshalltown to Duluth should be in Marshall county.

Northern Minnesota resorts this year are enjoying the greatest patronage they have ever known and resort keepers attribute the increase solely to good roads. I have visited more than twenty resorts and the story is the same at each one—more business than can be cared for and the influx due to accessability. Last Sunday, July 15, more than 100 tourists were turned away from Grand View Lodge, Gull lake. The several other resorts at this lake and other lakes are also crowded.

Business Good Elsewhere

Hubert lake, a few miles distant, now reached by graveled road, is doing a capacity business for the first time. White Fish lake, visited by some Marshalltown vacationists in former years, is crowded and one of the resort keepers says the exceptional business is due to a new gravel road through the pine timber.

Leech lake is now enjoying a great run and may be reached from the Twin Cities over pavement and excellent graveled roads. A fine new hotel has been opened at Walker and is filled with tourists.

From Nisswa to Duluth, one travels over pavement for much of the way with fine graveled roads where there is no pavement, even through the tamarack swamps.

Duluth Cuts Big Hill

Duluth is spending hundreds of thousands of dollars on new roads, eliminating the notorious Thompson hill which is said to have burned up enough money in tires and brake bands to have paid for the new highway several times over. We burned out a brake band descending this hill. A week from now it will be possible to enter the city over a safe and pleasant road, most of which will be paved.

Roads over the Messaba range would put Iowa to shame. The principal towns—Eveleth, Virginia, Buhl, Chisholm and Hibbing—are linked with paving and there is paving much of the way from Duluth to Virginia.

South from Grand Rapids to Aitkin, by way of Hill City, a distance of sixty-three miles with only two hours on the route, one encounters an ideal gravel road, superior to the Jefferson Highway. This is a primary road and is used as a short cut to the south.

Roads Well Marked

We were surprised to see men with rakes on the graveled roads, engaged constantly in smoothing the gravel and removing the larger stones as they come to the surface.

In northern Minnesota greater care is taken in marking the roads for tourists. Signs proclaiming "curve," "cross road," "railroad," etc., make travel safe and enjoyable. Through the wooded sections and in reaches where towns are scattered and farm homes few in number, signs call attention to springs of excellent, cold water by the roadside. Tourists, of course, appreciate these greatly.

Worst Road Nearest Home

Gravel roads may be constructed at much less cost in Minnesota than in Iowa as there are gravel deposits everywhere. Most of the paving is concrete although there is some which seems to be a surface of tarvia on a concrete base. This, however, is not satisfactory, since it becomes rough and pitty where the foundation was too dry.

In traveling more than 1,100 miles from Marshalltown to Nisswa, Walker, Duluth and the Mesaba range, the only bad roads we have traversed were in Marshall county, north of Liscomb, and for a short distance south of Brainerd, Minn.—Times-Republican, Marshalltown, Ia., July 22.

PRESIDENT HARDING DEAD

type and acquired his first contact with newspaper work. While President, Mr. Harding still carried as a luck piece the printer's rule he used when "sticking type." As editor of his college paper he showed an aptitude and a liking for journalism.

In the meantime Dr. Harding had moved his family from the farm to Caledonia and when Warren was 19 moved to Marion, in the adjoining county, then a place of about 4,000 population. There Warren got a job at the office of a small weekly, The Marion Mirror. Just before that he had been studying law, selling insurance and teaching school, but from the moment he went to Marion he determined to be a newspaperman.

While with the Mirror he did all the odd jobs that fell to the lot of the apprentice in the old time country newspaper office, from scrubbing out the office and setting type to writing editorials and soliciting advertisements and subscriptions.

The Marion Mirror was a Democratic paper and the majority of the voters in Marion at that time were Democrats. Dr. Harding was a Republican, and Warren, then just becoming greatly interested in public affairs, was also a Republican and one of the uncompromising variety. The situation in the Mirror office became somewhat embarrassing, for the youthful Harding not only joined the local James G. Blaine club which the Republicans had formed for the presidential campaign, but insisted upon wearing a black, shiny Blaine high hat to work.

It has often been said that Harding was discharged from the Mirror for this, but that was not true. He was too valuable to his employer. He not only knew the mechanics of the printer's trade, but had a pleasant way of writing about births, weddings and other local happenings that made friends for the paper. The best proof of the error of the story that he was discharged by the owner of the Mirror for his republicanism, is that this same owner, the future president's "first boss" in the newspaper business, helped him to realize his ambition to become a newspaper owner.

Buys Marion Star

There was a little daily newspaper in Marion called the Star, which had been started by a former peanut vendor who failed to make it successful. This paper was about to be sold for debt by the sheriff and Harding's employer, the owner of the Mirror, advised the owner of the Independent to buy the Star and scrap it lest it might later compete actively with the Independent. This the owner of the Independent refused to do.

Nettled by the rejection of his advice, the owner of the Mirror called in Harding and told him to go over to the courthouse and buy the Star.

"I've nothing to buy it with," said Harding.

"You go over and do what I tell you and it will work out all right," Harding was told.

On the following day, Nov. 26, 1884, this announcement appeared in the Star:

"We have purchased the Star and will stay"—The Star Publishing company.

Harding's early years with the Star were full of difficulties. He sold life insurance "on the side," and resorted to al sorts of expedients to meet the Saturday payroll.

With his ability, energy and courtesy Harding finally won the good will of the people of Marion for the Star. He devoted himself to booming the town and made friends among the businessmen. They turned advertising his way and at last, aided greatly by Mrs. Harding, who worked with her husband in his office, the Star "arrived" and its editor became a power in the community.

He made his first political speech in the early 90's in the hamlet of Martel, near Marion. His second speech at Scottstown so pleased an old Lincoln Republican that the veteran rushed up to him and said:

"Young man, you have the gift of gab. Keep it up and some day you'll be president of the United States."

First Elected State Senator

From speaking for others, Harding naturally turned to speaking for himself.....In 1898 the voters of Hardin, Logan, Marion and Union counties elected him to the state senate and rather against precedent he was re-elected for another term. In his first public office of consequence he performed his duties satisfactorily but without particular distinction and continued to make friends.

When his second term as state senator had expired Harding was elected lieutenant governor in 1903 on a ticket headed by Myron T. Herrick, later one of his principal supporters for the Republican nomination for president. He was mentioned in the next state campaign as a possibility for the nomination for governor. He declined a renomination and resumed his newspaper work.

Formulated Newspaper Creed

Shortly afterward he formulated his newspaper creed, which was received by every newspaper reporter on the Star.

"Remember there are two sides to every question. Get them both.

"Be truthful. Get the facts. Mistakes are inevitable but strive for accuracy. I would rather have one story exactly right than a hundred half wrong.

"Be decent, be fair, be generous.

"Boost, don't knock!

"There's good in everybody. Bring out the good and never heedlessly hurt the feelings of anybody.

"In reporting a political gathering, give the facts. Tell the story as it is, not as you would like to have it. Treat all parties alike. If there is any politics to be played we will play it in our editorial columns.

"Treat all religious matters reverently.

"If it can possibly be avoided, never bring ignominy to an innocent man, woman or child in telling of the misdeeds or misfortunes of a relative.

"Don't wait to be asked, but do it without the asking, and above all, be clean and never let a dirty word or suggestive story get into type.

"I want this paper so conducted that it can go into any home without destroying the innocence of any child."

In 1910 Harding received the Republican nomination for governor of Ohio, was defeated by Judson Harmon, democrat. His nomination was brought about largely by Geo. B. Cox, Republican leader, who caused a break in a deadlock by swinging his support to Harding to avert a threatened stampede for Representative Nicholas Longworth, son-in-law of the late Theodore Roosevelt. Harding took his defeat at the election philosophically, and kept on running his newspaper.

SPORTS

DEMPSEY GOOD SPORT, SAYS McAULIFFE

By HENRY L. FARRELL
United Press Sports Editor

New York, Aug. 3.—Jack McAuliffe, the genial lightweight and the only champion who ever retired undefeated from the ring, has an idea that Jack Dempsey may yet come into the popularity that up to the time of the present champion has always come as a heritage to heavyweight title holders.

Dempsey, as is well known, is not a hero in the public eye, for reasons that are hard to explain. It might be going too far to say that Dempsey is the most unpopular champion on the long list, because Jack Johnson held even a lower place in the estimation of the public.

Johnson brought disfavor upon himself by his conduct after he had won the championship from Jim Jeffries, but Dempsey has done nothing since he won the title from Jess Willard to bring discredit upon himself, or on the game that has been so good to him.

Dempsey's war record got him in bad with the public and while most everyone has forgotten there was such a thing as a big war, the impression still lingers that Dempsey didn't do something when he had the chance.

Friends of the champion and those who are broad-minded enough to go back to the days leading up to the war, know that Dempsey was largely the victim of circumstances and poor advice.

McAuliffe believes that a fight with Luis Firpo, the South American giant, will do much to win for Dempsey the public esteem that he deserves. Until the time that Dempsey is accepted as a national representative against a foreigner, he will not have the opportunity to get himself back into favor, McAuliffe believes.

"Carpentier was the first foreign fighter to be cheered over an American and that can be explained," McAuliffe says. "The war records of the two fighters was the big issue there and the fight was staged at a time when the hardships of the war was rather a fresh memory in the eyes of the public.

"John L. Sullivan gained his greatest popularity when he fought Mitchell, the sentiment being 'our' champion against a foreigner. When Dempsey meets Firpo, unless the animosity toward Dempsey is too deep rooted to be pulled out, the American public will rally the same way behind the champion.

"Indications of this were shown in the Firpo-Willard fight when the crowd arose spontaneously and yelled for Willard to win when he rallied and seemed to have a chance. The sentiment there was clearly for an American against a foreigner, because Willard during his regime as champion, was hardly more popular than Dempsey.

"Through all his trials and troubles, Dempsey has been such a good sport that some time sentiment is bound to change in his favor. He never has grumbled or complained. He has never made answer to accusations that were manifestly unfair and untrue and he has never shown malice toward the crowds that practically razzed him on his two last appearances in the ring."

AMUSEMENTS

Paramount Films Clyde Fitch Play

The late Clyde Fitch, dramatist, whose play, "The Woman in the Case," was adapted to Paramount Pictures as a stellar vehicle for Betty Compson under the title, "The Law and the Woman," also wrote "The Cowboy and the Lady," which has been picturized by Paramount with Mary Miles Minter and Tom Moore in the leading roles. Mr. Moore is seen as the "dude" cowboy and Miss Minter is the lady whose unhappy marital affairs result in a great deal of trouble ere she finds the road to happiness.

Charles Maigne directed the picture, which was filmed in the Jackson Hole cattle country of Wyoming. Following the completion of the ranch shots, the company returned to Hollywood, where the interior scenes were photographed. Patricia Palmer, Viora Daniel, Robert Schable Leonard Clapham, Guy Oliver and Robert Mack are in the cast. The picture will be shown at the Lyceum tonight and Saturday.

A romantic and exciting tale of the west, this play offers great opportunities as well for comedy. The idea of cowpunchers on motorcycles trying to rope steers, a modern idea of ranching, with filing systems and the like; the rancher who dresses like a gentleman of fashion—all supply mirthful moments which contrast with the tragedy at the end and the trial which results in the vindication of the hero from complicity in the killing at a dance of the worthless husband.

Vicious Rattlesnake Provides an Unusual Episode in New Film

Among many moments of surprise, shock and suspense found in "Quicksands," the new Hawks picture which comes to the Park theatre Saturday and Sunday with Helene Chadwick, Richard Dix, Alan Hale and a notable cast, is one thrill so out of the ordinary that it warrants advance description.

It concerns two men and a girl, a deck of cards and a vicious rattlesnake. What goes before must be explained that the episode in question be fully understood. The scene is a Mexican "cantina" reputed to be the rendezvous of evil characters who smuggle narcotics into this country. Among the men and women there a Mexican girl is conspicuous for her beauty, charm and alert intelligence. She protects and encourages a shambling youth whom she knows to be the scapegrace son of Col. Patterson, in command of the United States military post across the border.

The girl repulses the advances of Ferrago, a burly blond heartbreaker high in the councils of the criminals. He is incensed because of her shielding attitude toward the youth whose dependence on drugs is of course profitable to the gang. In a burst of bravado the cowardly Ferrago plans to humiliate the youth he knows to be a coward or possibly bring about his death, without being himself directly responsible for it.

The Cornellians, the boys from Cornell university certainly have lots of "pep" and harmony in their playing. It is typical college man's music. In other words, they thwang some "wicked jazz."

Johnny Wilson Getting in Shape for Fight With Greb

New York, Aug. 3.—Johnny Wilson, the middleweight champion of the world, who hasn't shown around these diggings since he had that unpleasant little party with one Bryan Downey at Boyle's Thirty Acres nearly two years ago, is getting into shape for a championship date with Harry Greb, the Pittsburgh flash, which is scheduled to take place at the Polo grounds Aug. 31. The row is down for 15 rounds and John is tossing in his old title for Harry to take a peg at. Wilson is training at Summit, N. J.

Fred Wright Medalist In California Tourney

Los Angeles, Aug. 3—Fred Wright Jr., member of the American Walker cup team, yesterday turned in a 73 for the lowest medal score in the qualifying round of the California Country club's invitational golf tournament here.

Willie Hunter, former British open champion, had a bad day, taking 80 for his record. The course record is 72.

$500,000 SAID TO BE SUBSCRIBED FOR 2ND DEMPSEY-GIBBONS GO

Los Angeles, Aug. 3.—A return match bteween champion Jack Dempsey and Tommy Gibbons to take place at Fort Mac Arthur, Los Angeles harbor, Nov. 27 for the benefit of disabled veterans of the world war is being sought by A. E. Santweir, who said he represented a group of sportsmen here.

Santweir said last night that $500,000 had been subscribed for the purse and that it was in a bank.

Santweir left last night for San Francisco to try to obtain permission from Major General Charles C. Morton to stage a 15 round fight to a decision. Santweir said that if General Morton gave his consent, he would go to Washington to seek permission also of secretary of war Weeks and then would talk in New York with Jack Kearns, Dempsey's manager, concerning terms.

Northern Minnesota Roads Excellent; Lake Resorts Filled to Overflow

By JOSEPH A. WHITACRE

I have been so impressed with the excellence of Minnesota roads and the system of maintenance that I can not let the opportunity pass to tell a few things that stand out so pronouncedly in a system which seems so nearly perfect. It is to be regretted that the only really unkept roads from Marshalltown to Duluth should be in Marshall county.

Northern Minnesota resorts this year are enjoying the greatest patronage they have ever known and resort keepers attribute the increase solely to good roads. I have visited more than twenty resorts and the story is the same at each one—more business than can be cared for and the influx due to accessability. Last Sunday, July 15, more than 100 tourists were turned away from Grand View Lodge, Gull lake. The several other resorts at this lake and other lakes are also crowded.

Business Good Elsewhere

Hubert lake, a few miles distant, now reached by graveled road, is doing a capacity business for the first time. White Fish lake, visited by some Marshalltown vacationists in former years, is crowded and one of the resort keepers says the exceptional business is due to a new gravel road through the pine timber.

Leech lake is now enjoying a great run and may be reached from the Twin Cities over pavement and excellent graveled roads. A fine new hotel has been opened at Walker and is filled with tourists.

From Nisswa to Duluth, one travels over pavement for much of the way with fine graveled roads where there is no pavement, even through the tamarack swamps.

Duluth Cuts Big Hill

Duluth is spending hundreds of thousands of dollars on new roads, eliminating the notorious Thompson hill which is said to have burned up enough money in tires and brake bands to have paid for the new highway several times over. We burned out a brake band descending this hill. A week from now it will be possible to enter the city over a safe and pleasant road, most of which will be paved.

Roads over the Messaba range would put Iowa to shame. The principal towns—Eveleth, Virginia, Buhl, Chisholm and Hibbing—are linked with paving and there is paving much of the way from Duluth to Virginia.

South from Grand Rapids to Aitkin, by way of Hill City, a distance of sixty-three miles with only two hours on the route, one encounters an ideal gravel road, superior to the Jefferson Highway. This is a primary road and is used as a short cut to the south.

Roads Well Marked

We were surprised to see men with rakes on the graveled roads, engaged constantly in smoothing the gravel and removing the larger stones as they come to the surface.

In northern Minnesota greater care is taken in marking the roads for tourists. Signs proclaiming "curve," "cross road," "railroad," etc., make travel safe and enjoyable. Through the wooded sections and in reaches where towns are scattered and farm homes few in number, signs call attention to springs of excellent, cold water by the roadside. Tourists, of course, appreciate these greatly.

Worst Road Nearest Home

Gravel roads may be constructed at much less cost in Minnesota than in Iowa as there are gravel deposits everywhere. Most of the paving is concrete although there is some which seems to be a surface of tarvia on a concrete base. This, however, is not satisfactory, since it becomes rough and pitty where the foundation was too dry.

In traveling more than 1,100 miles from Marshalltown to Nisswa, Walker, Duluth and the Mesaba range, the only bad roads we have traversed were in Marshall county, north of Liscomb, and for a short distance south of Brainerd, Minn.—Times-Republican, Marshalltown, Ia., July 22.

CHANCE WILL REMAIN AS RED SOX MANAGER

Boston, Aug. 3—Frank Chance will remain as manager of the Boston Red Sox for the present season, it was announced by Robert Quinn, who, with his associates from Columbus, Ohio, took over the club from Harry Frazee yesterday. "I'm not going to make any changes until after the season is closed," Quinn said.

PRESIDENT HARDING DEAD

type and acquired his first contact with newspaper work. While President, Mr. Harding still carried as a luck piece the printer's rule he used when "sticking type." As editor of his college paper he showed an aptitude and a liking for journalism.

In the meantime Dr. Harding had moved his family from the farm to Caledonia and when Warren was 19 moved to Marion, in the adjoining county, then a place of about 4,000 population. There Warren got a job at the office of a small weekly, The Marion Mirror. Just before that he had been studying law, selling insurance and teaching school, but from the moment he went to Marion he determined to be a newspaperman.

While with the Mirror he did all the odd jobs that fell to the lot of the apprentice in the old time country newspaper office, from scrubbing out the office and setting type to writing editorials and soliciting advertisements and subscriptions.

The Marion Mirror was a Democratic paper and the majority of the voters in Marion at that time were Democrats. Dr. Harding was a Republican, and Warren, then just becoming greatly interested in public affairs, was also a Republican and one of the uncompromising variety. The situation in the Mirror office became somewhat embarrassing, for the youthful Harding not only joined the local James G. Blaine club which the Republicans had formed for the presidential campaign, but insisted upon wearing a black, shiny Blaine high hat to work.

It has often been said that Harding was discharged from the Mirror for this, but that was not true. He was too valuable to his employer. He not only knew the mechanics of the printer's trade, but had a pleasant way of writing about births, weddings and other local happenings that made friends for the paper. The best proof of the error of the story that he was discharged by the owner of the Mirror for his republicanism, is that this same owner, the future president's "first boss" in the newspaper business, helped him to realize his ambition to become a newspaper owner.

Buys Marion Star

There was a little daily newspaper in Marion called the Star, which had been started by a former peanut vendor who failed to make it successful. This paper was about to be sold for debt by the sheriff and Harding's employer, the owner of the Mirror, advised the owner of the Independent to buy the Star and scrap it lest it might later compete actively with the Independent. This the owner of the Independent refused to do.

Nettled by the rejection of his advice, the owner of the Mirror called in Harding and told him to go over to the courthouse and buy the Star.

"I've nothing to buy it with," said Harding.

"You go over and do what I tell you and it will work out all right," Harding was told.

On the following day, Nov. 26, 1884, this announcement appeared in the Star:

"We have purchased the Star and will stay"—The Star Publishing company.

Harding's early years with the Star were full of difficulties. He sold life insurance "on the side," and resorted to al sorts of expedients to meet the Saturday payroll.

With his ability, energy and courtesy Harding finally won the good will of the people of Marion for the Star. He devoted himself to booming the town and made friends among the businessmen. They turned advertising his way and at last, aided greatly by Mrs. Harding, who worked with her husband in his office, the Star "arrived" and its editor became a power in the community.

He made his first political speech in the early 90's in the hamlet of Martel, near Marion. His second speech at Scottstown so pleased an old Lincoln Republican that the veteran rushed up to him and said:

"Young man, you have the gift of gab. Keep it up and some day you'll be president of the United States."

First Elected State Senator

From speaking for others, Harding naturally turned to speaking for himself.....In 1898 the voters of Hardin, Logan, Marion and Union counties elected him to the state senate and rather against precedent he was re-elected for another term. In his first public office of consequence he performed his duties satisfactorily but without particular distinction and continued to make friends.

When his second term as state senator had expired Harding was elected lieutenant governor in 1903 on a ticket headed by Myron T. Herrick, later one of his principal supporters for the Republican nomination for president. He was mentioned in the next state campaign as a possibility for the nomination for governor. He declined a renomination and resumed his newspaper work.

Formulated Newspaper Creed

Shortly afterward he formulated his newspaper creed, which was received by every newspaper reporter on the Star.

"Remember there are two sides to every question. Get them both.

"Be truthful. Get the facts. Mistakes are inevitable but strive for accuracy. I would rather have one story exactly right than a hundred half wrong.

"Be decent, be fair, be generous.

"Boost, don't knock!

"There's good in everybody. Bring out the good and never heedlessly hurt the feelings of anybody.

"In reporting a political gathering, give the facts. Tell the story as it is, not as you would like to have it. Treat all parties alike. If there is any politics to be played we will play it in our editorial columns.

"Treat all religious matters reverently.

"If it can possibly be avoided, never bring ignominy to an innocent man, woman or child in telling of the misdeeds or misfortunes of a relative.

"Don't wait to be asked, but do it without the asking, and above all, be clean and never let a dirty word or suggestive story get into type.

"I want this paper so conducted that it can go into any home without destroying the innocence of any child."

In 1910 Harding received the Republican nomination for governor of Ohio, was defeated by Judson Harmon, democrat. His nomination was brought about largely by Geo. B. Cox, Republican leader, who caused a break in a deadlock by swinging his support to Harding to avert a threatened stampede for Representative Nicholas Longworth, son-in-law of the late Theodore Roosevelt. Harding took his defeat at the election philosophically, and kept on running his newspaper.
